

Americans Pay More for Sugar Than the Rest of the World

This isn't a "sweet tax." Rather, the culprit is sugar protectionism policies dating to the Great Depression that make sugar trade above the price for international delivery.

